Researching Warren County Records 101

The Warren County Administration Building at 406 Justice Drive in Lebanon, Ohio, is filled with information and research resources for those looking to discover their family stories and hometown history. This presentation will cover how to find this information and utilize these resources, giving examples of actual research that has been done. A visual map will be provided to help you plan and have a successful visit. Departments covered include the Warren County Genealogical Society Resource Library, the Warren County Records Center & Archives, the Warren County Recorder's Office, and the Map Room.

Presented by Diana Lovett and Suzanne Combs

Diana Lovett is a professional genealogist and a native of Warren County. She resides in Lebanon and focuses her research on Warren County families and history. Diana specializes in family research, property records, adoption, and the use of genealogy to support individuals suffering from Alzheimer's Disease. She works for a locally owned, private in-home care company as the Community Liaison and volunteers for the Warren County Genealogical Society.

Suzanne Combs retired from the Warren County Engineer's Office in the Tax Map Department after 34 years of service. She is a native of Warren County and currently resides in Springboro. Suzanne's experience includes interpreting parcel descriptions in comparison to property maps and researching parcel descriptions using Laredo and other indexes in the Recorder's Office.

Diana and Suzanne's presentation is a combined effort to serve the Warren County community by providing information on important resources for research. Their goal is to increase public interest in the local history of families and communities while teaching the importance of preserving it. They are fellow graduates of Franklin High School and were reintroduced through research in the Map Room prior to Suzanne's retirement in 2022.
